FLOOD DESTRUCTION-Surging waters, ripping through Rapid City, S.D., Friday night and early Saturday, floated this house some 300 feet from its foundation, then crumpled it into a heap among the other damaged houses.

208 Killed, 500 Missing in Flash Floods After Rains Burst Dam in South Dakota

(AP).-Flash floods touched off by torrential rains in the Bisck Hills left 208 persons dead and 500 missing pesterday. They were victims of walls of water that swept through Rapid City and the surrounding area after the rains burst an earthen dam at Canyon Lake.

One official indicated that the death toll might pass 300. A wissing-persons bureau was set up yesterday."

Damage has been estimated by South Dakota officials and Army engineers as near $100 million. President Nixon declared the flood-stricken region a disaster disaster to hit South Dakota. The death toll exceeded the 112 killed in an 1888 blizzard, which was listed by the state historian as the worst previous disaster on record.

The Rapid City flood was also the worst in all of the United States in recent years. The cost-liest U.S. flood, in human lives, was the Johnstown, Pa., flood of 1889, when about 2,000 died. Floods killed 118 in West Virginia last February and 100 in Virginia in 1969. The world's worst recent floods were in northwestern Europe in 1953 when 1.794 died in the Netherlands alone; in Agadir, Morocco, in 1960, when more than 10,000 died in a tidal wave and fire, and in Italy in 1962, when a dam collapse killed about 2,000.

. New Rain Threat The National Weather Service said there was a possibility of severe thunderstorms again today over the western South Dakota where up to seven inches of rain produced the torrent of death and destruction yesterday. A Red Cross official, Phil Gaddis of Atlanta, Ga. sald after surveying the city of 43,000 persons that the floods had caused more concentrated damage than the most severe hurricane he has one can comprehend." The senator, who planned to go back East tonight for cam-paigning tomorrow in New York's June 20 primary, was told by Mayor Donald Barnett that assistance from federal avencies had been swift and that the city was not in a health crisis at this

The mayor said that although the city's water system remained inoperable today, water had been brought to 10 designated Rapid City sites from nearby Ellsworth Air Force Base, and hospitals and other emergency facilities were being supplied with electric power. However, long-distance tele-phone communications remained difficult and natural-gas service was almost completely shut off Doctors and military medical personnel administered typhoid shots to survivors until vaccine ran out yesterday. A fresh supply was flown in overnight to be given to people who had been scratched or cut and in contact with the floodwaters.

Catching many residents asleep late Friday night and early yesterday, walls of water battered houses and swept away cars, mobile homes and some bridges. The devastation was compounded by landslides, explosions and fires caused by the rupturing of gas

Bodies of the victims were reported found throughout yester-day in trees, cars and along the edges of ditches as the waters began to subside and a fog set in over the region. The sun came oot this morning, but the forecast was still: "possible rain." Sheriff Glenn Best said that be believed that only a third of the dead had been found. He made the comment when tha death toll stood at 105.

SAIGON, June 11 1AP1.-U.S. jets have destroyed a hydroelectrie plant capable of producing 75 percent of North Vietnam's power requirements, U.S. spokesmen announced today,

The plant was wrecked resterday in the first attack of the war against Hanoi's hydroelectric installations. The strike took place in the Red River Valley. U.S. jets avolded hitting a nearby dam which if breached would have flooded the delta. Previously. four thermal power plants have been bit by U.S. jets.

More special air raids were carried out today by fighter-homb-ers against scores of railroad cars isolated by cuts along North Vietnam's northeast and north-west rail lines to China, informants disclosed. The sources described the raids as "successful." They were the first strikes reported against cars themselves since the resumption of bombing

The informants estimated that many as 600 railroad cars trying to move south from China with war materials were strung out along the network, severed by veeks of U.S. air strikes. Most nerc reported on sidings. Earlier F-4 Phantoms cut the Lang Dang rallroad bridge and the Tam Dan highway bridge along the north-east rail line, about 60 miles above Hanoi, spokesmen sald.

Air Chief Forced Out By Unauthorized Raids

By Seymour M. Hersh

WASHINGTON, June 11 (NYT).-Gen. John D. Lavelle was relieved as commander of Air Force units in Southeast Asia in March and denoted after ordering systematic and unauthorized mbing attacks of military targets in North Vietnam. He reported the raids to higher headquarters as "officially sanc-tioned "protective-reaction"

Gen. Lavelle, 55, who as head of the Seventh Air Force was responsible for all Air Force combat flights in Southeast Asia, was said by these sources to have ordered the bombing raids over a three-month period that began in early January, During those months, these sources said, the targets included airfields, radar sites, missile sites and anti-aircraft batterles throughout the southernmest panhandle region of North Vict-

Nixon Acted in April

The current bombing attacks on the North were approved by President Nixon in April.

New York Times correspondent Neil Sheeban reported, meanwhile, that U.S. military leaders now are being permitted to wage the air war as they want in Indochina-sealing off of North Vietnam's coast and harbors with mines, followed by the systematic relatively unrestrained de struction of military and industrial targets in the country.

[President Nixon's two-monthold air war differs in major respects from the three-and-oholf-year bombing campaign waged by his predecessor, Lyndon E. .[In the current effort, as before, there are restricted zones at Hanoi and Haiphong as well as a so-called huffer zone along the China border that is about 25 miles deep. On the other hand. the military commanders are free to strike designated military targets in the restricted and buifer zones whenever they feel the need to do so. More important, they have been permitted to restrike those targets to maintain their destruction.]

The impact of the unauthorized bombing raids on the Paris peace talks is impossible to assess. But one informed diplomat with experience in Paris, after being told of Gen. Lavelle's unauthoriced attacks, noted that the incident apparently began in the weeks after secret talks were broken off between Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's adviser for national security, and Le Duc Tho, North Vietnam's Polithuro member who is often in Paris.

The heavy amount of bombing described as protective reaction would "reinforce the distrust of us by North Vietnam," the government official said. "And to my mind, the main impediment to negotiations has always been that credibility with them is very (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

China Denounces 'Superpowers' as Spoilers of Environment

By Gladwin Hill

STOCKHOLM, June 11 (NYT). -China in its major address to the United Nations Environment Conference, denounced the Unit-ed States and other "imperialistic superpowers" yesterday as primarily responsible for global environmental problems and demanded "compensation" for the underdeveloped countries.

Referring to Vietnam, Tang Ke, eliairman of the Chinese delegation, told the 114-nation con-

"Our conference should strongly condemn the United States for their wanton bombinge and shellings, use of chemical weap-ons, massacre of the people, destruction of human lives, annihilation of plants and animals and pollution of the environ-

Despite a long barrage of such aspersions, however, Mr. Ke, viceminister of fuel and chemical industries, during a half-hour delineation of China's environmental philosophy, said that his country wants to cooperate in international efforts and that "there is no ground for any negative view about the achievement of global environmental quality.

The vehemence of the Chinese attack, so soon after President Nixon's friendly visit to China, appeared to take the United States by surprise.

The American delegation quickly asked for rebuttal time, under conference rules. But nearly five hours later, as the session was ending, the delegation's vice-chairman, Christian A. Berter jr., reported that the rebuttal was not yet rendy. It was deferred until tomorrow.

The Chinese delegate's talk, at the conference's main plenary session was heard by American delegates, Mrs. Shirley Temple Black, Sen. Frank E. Moss, D. Utah, and Sen. James L. Buckley, New York Conservative-Republican.

Common Cause

The Chinese presentation, emphasizing the common cause of the world's underdeveloped countries, which outnumber advanced nations at the conference by more than two to one, received a hearty round of applause at the

Mr. Ke also remarked that the presence at the conference of representatives of the puppet cliques of South Korea and South Vietnam is totally illegal," and that the involuntary absence of East Germany, a nonmember of the United Nations, is regrettable. There was no mention of the Soviet Union's deliberate absence.

Tang Ke, chairman of Chinese delegation to UN Conference on Human Environ-

"Our position on the question of the conservation and improvement of the human environment," he said, "is that we support the developing countries and object to the superpowers subjecting other countries to their control and plunder on the pretext of improving the human environment. Victim countries have the right to apply sanctions against and demand compensation from the culprit countries." Defensive' Tests

Alluding to a proposed declaration of a number of nations against pollution from nuclear testing, Mr. Ke defended China's atomic weapon development as "defensive." He said that the proposal's authors "pretend to be impartial" while ignoring the "superpowers' nuclear stockpiling, and this is what the Chinese delegation cannot accept."

Apart from such rhetorical jousting, the two-week conference, now at its halfway point, has so far largely surmounted schisms that some feared might scuttle efforts to produce a "framework" for international environmental cooperation.

The participants, representing about 90 percent of the earth's ment, speaking in Stockholm. people, are virtually unanimous

A former high-ranking government official said that the unauthorized bombing undermined the U.S. protests at the beginning of Hanoi's offensive. Those protests alleged that North Vietnam was violating the 1968 Paris accords that call—in the U.S. view -for a restriction on ground assaults in return for a bombing

During the first three months of this year, administration spokesmen repeatedly insisted that no bombing of military tar-gets in North Vietnam—such as those struck by Gen. Other National Guardamen were being used in relief operations. Gov. Richard Kneip, who arrived here yesterday after a hurried trip from the state capital, Pierre, said rescuers "were picking up bodies all across the southwestern part of the city." He said that it might take weeks to decide on the full death toll, because so many persons were thought washed away, purhaps buried in mud.

Rescue workers stretched ropes across the Cheyenne River where Rapid Creek flows into it, 40 miles downstream, to catch bodies that were washed down the creek. At least eight of the known

Officials feared for 4,000 campers believed in the Black Hills, a popular vacation site. The other is a recommendation to the UP's General Assembly for the establishment of a permanent unit within that organization to coordinate international environmental activities,

The United States and many other nations feel that without such a unit international activities will remain fragmented and ineffectual and that most of the conference's laborious deliberations will have been for nought.

A seven-nation task force led by the U.S. delegation this weekend completed a blueprint for the new organization.

With many political observers of the opinion that Gov. Wallace will not run es a third-party can-didate this year. It is important to see where his vote would go in the event he does not enter the race.

To determine this, registered voters choosing Gov. Wallace were asked to select between just the two major party candidates in each of the two trial heats.

The national findings show Mr. Nixon benefiting over each of his two leading rivals, if Gov. Wallace is not in the picture.

If the Massachusetts Democrat were President, Rep. Mills said, he might as Vice-President be allowed to assume responsibilities that would be denied him under another chief executive.

"I would have a hard time turning down the vice-presidency if the convention chose Sen, Kennedy, and the convention may do it," said Rep, Mills, who is chairman of the House Weys and Means Committee and remains a candidate for the presidential nomination himself.

First Ballot or Never

Rep. Mills sald that in his view Sen. George McGovern, D., S.D., must win the nomination on the first ballot if he is to get it at all. And if he fails to win nomination on the first ballot. Sen. Kennedy would be a contender.

Rep. Mills indicated that he doubted Sen. McGovern could get the necessary votes for a firstballot victory. He said last week that there was a feeling in the South that the South Dakota senator "is perhaps too liberal."

He also said that if the election were held now, President Nixon would win. But he added that it is impossible to tell what will happen between now and No-

Alan Baron, one of senator's national coordinators, said:

Aide Is Puzzled

"It's amazing to me that with McGovern as close to the nomination as be is, the party leadership isn't pragmatic enough to include at least some McGovern people on their slate."

The decision to freeze out the McGovern forces was made by Gov. Warren Hearnes, who is committed to Sen. Edmund S. Muskie. Gov. Hearnes, who influences most of the delegates who are nominally uncommitted, hopes to play a kingmaker's role at the national convention.

Despite impressive victories in Missouri's precinct conventions in April, Ben. McGovern won only 12 delegates in congressional district conventions. Forty-three others are uncommitted, about half of them loyal to Gov. Hearnes and some leaning to either Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey or Rep. Wilbur Mills, D., Ark.

Sen. McGovern faced similar oblems this weekend in such states as Tennessee, Oklahoma and Kansas, which also were rounding out their state delegations. And in Texas, where Democrats hold their state convention Tuesday, Sen. McGovern faces a problem in holding on to what he already thought he had won. His supporters there picked up enough strength in precinct cau-cuses to merit 30 of the state's 130 delegates. But nothing in the Texas party rules requires national delegates to be awarded proportionately and a move is under way to hold Sen. Mc-Govern's convention strength to bare minimum. Sen. McGovern will soon begin a swing through some Southern states, hoping to allay the sus-picions of party regulars that he too radical to be nominated and that he might carry their state tickets down to defeat in Washington State Dept. Irked

By Laird Comment WASHINGTON, June 11 (NYT) .- The State Department, somewhat irked by a statement made by the Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, said Priday that while the Russians may have tested a missile capable of carrying several independently targeted warheads, they had not yet tested the warhead system itself.

The department was seeking to clarify and amplify Mr. Laird's comment to the Senate Armed Services Committee earlier last week when he said that the Soviet Union had tested what he called a "MURV missile." MURV is an abbreviation for multiple independently targeted re-entry vehicle—a technology which so far is possessed only by the United Mr. Laird's remarks, made in a closed-door session of the committee, and reported in The New York Times and the International Herald Tribune, seemed to some people to contradict a statement made by Gerard C. Smith, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, who said Thursday that the Russians had not tested a MIRV. The State Department, supporting Mr. Smith, issued the following statement through its spokesman, Charles W. Bray:

"It is clear that the Soviet Union from all available evidence is carrying on a program to de-velop MIRV technology, although they are a long way behind the United States in this area. We know of no evidence that they have tested a MIRV. That's what Ambassador Smith said yesterday. There is a difference between testing a missile that can carry a MIRV and testing MIRVs."

Jerry W. Friedheim, a Pentagon spakesman, refused Friday to dis-cuss Mr. Laird's testimony directly -a.though he had confirmed Thursday what Mr. Laird said. He said, however, that the Soviet Union was between 12 and 16 months away from developing "a MURV capability."

Tributes Paid To Adviser Who Died in Vietnam

SAIGON, June 11 (AP) -John Paul Vann, the highest-ranking American civilian killed in the Indochina war, was praised today as a man whose courage and commitment to a cause were his own best enlogy.

A memorial service for Mr. Vann, killed in a Central Highlands helicopter crash Friday, was held at U.S. military beadquarters in Saigon. More than 200 persons, led by Ambassador Elisworth Bunker and Gen, Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vletnam, attended the service. Among them were numerous South Vietnamese civilian and military officials.

In a statement read by the U.S. command chaplain, Col. William V. O'Connor, Army chief of staff William C. Westmoreland said Mr. Vann was "known for his personal courage, professional excellence and total commitment to his country, its allies and his Mr. Vann, who first joined the

Test Is Passed at Los Alamos By New Nuclear Accelerator

By John Noble Wilford

LOS ALAMOS, N.M., June 11 (NYT).—A new medium-energy accelerator capable of generating proton beams thousands of times more invense than any other comparable machine was tested Successfully at full power early Priday morning, opening a "nex window" on the atomic nucleus and the mysterious forces that hold it together.

The $57 million accelator here at the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory was designed to do for medium-energy physics what the National Accelator Laboratory at Weston, Ill., should do for highenergy physics. Medium-energy physics concentrates on the study of the atom's nucleus. High-energy physics is more interested in the nature of the particles that make

In his rookie year, 1928, he hit 320 and had 25 home runs as the Dodgers' first baseman.

In five seasons in the big lengues, he had a lifetime mark of .305. His best year was 1930, when he hit 336 in 146 games.

ics Facility, after the retiring Democratic senator from New Mexico-is also expected to be employed as a research tool in radio chemistry, weapon technology, solid-state physics and cancer therapy.

Experiments using the halfmile-long machine, which is buried in a high mesa, are schedwied to begin next April.

In its first full-scale test, after 10 years of planning and preparing and a tenge week of fine tuning, the new accelerator produced a beam of hydrogen protons at energies of 800 MEV (million electron volts), the machine's designed capacity.

Noclear Particles

Although it is by no means the most powerful—the Weston facility produced 200 BEV (billion ectron volts) in its first test March 1-the Los Alamos machine operates at energies and intensities especially suited to prove how individual nuclear particles behave and interact with each other within the nucleus as a whole.

The higher energy and less intense accelerator beams smash atoms to discover the existence and the individual properties of the most elementary of subnuclear particles.

Protons striking targets at energies of 890 MEV produce a subnuclear particle called a meson, which is of particular interest to nuclear physicists since it is believed to be the "glue" that holds nuciei together,

Washington Lawyer Indicted, Allegedly Ran Call-Girl Ring

WASHINGTON, June 11 (AP). A grand jury indicted a 30-yearold lawyer Friday on charges that he headed a high-priced call-girl ring staffed by secretaries and office workers from Capitol Hill and involving at least one White House secretary, two Washington newspapers said.

The Justice Department confirmed that a 22-count indictment was filed against Phillip M. Ballley, a Washington lawyer. Several of the counts charged that Mr. Bailley "compelled, induced, enticed and procured a female person to engage in prostitution.

Other counts of the indictment charged that he traveled from Maryland into the District of Columbia "with the intent to facilitate the promotion, management and establishment ... of a business enterprise involving prostitution."

Threat Charged it also charged that on several occasions Mr. Bailley "transmitted from the district into Maryland a communication containing a threat to injure the reputation of ... a female person." Mr. Bailley vehemently cenled the charges, according to the Washington Star. According to the Washington Daily News, Mr Bailley said that FBI agents executed a search warrant on his home on April 5.

They seized my camera and 200 photographs of naked women whom I dated. But I never did anything wrong," he was quoted

U.S. Deserter Held in Denmark The purpose of his visit to On Drug Charges

COPENHAGEN, June 11 (AP). -A U.S. Army deserter was jailed today pending investigation of charges that he headed a drug pushing network that sold at least $200,000 worth of morphine base in Copenhagen during the last few years.

The deserter was identified as Ted Price, 23, of Cleveland. He came to Denmark in 1969 after deserting from his Army unit in West Germany. His apprehension last night was the latest in a series of police actions that have caused a drug shortage among addicts in Copenhagen.

In a preliminary court hearing today, Price said that he had only been a small wheel in tha illegal drug trade. He denied that he had handled more than a few pounds of drugs,

The court failed him for three weeks pending further police in-vestigation and a trial Price was not granted political asylum he came here because Danish authorities refused to accept him as a political refusee But to avoid extradition, he was given temporary work and residence permits.

The Laird Fallacy

the wake of the missile pacts with Moscow on stepping up the arms race in strategic offensive forces—instead of stepping it down -has led him into renewed scare statements about Soviet development of a MIRV multiple warhead missile. But the essential facts-as now clarified by both the State Department and the Pentagon—have not changed since Mr. Laird's February acknow!edgment that the Russians have not yet tested a MIRV warhead, something the United States first did four years ago.

Apparently the administration is pressing Congress for funds to speed up the offensive missile program as a means of holding the support of the Joint Chiefs of Staff for the Moscow accords. Adm. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs, preceded Mr. Laird in making military approval of the Strategic Arms Limitation (SALT) agreements conditional on accelerated development and deployment of new offensive weapons.

But no such deal by the administration for support from the military could bind the Congress to vote billions for development of a new missile submarine, a new submarinelaunched cruise missile and a new strategic homoer or for furthe, deployment of the expensive MIRV missiles. Minuteman-3 and Poseidon. In appropriations, the administration proposes, the Congress disposes. This maneuver to hold the missile pacts hostage should be disposed of expeditiously.

Ideally, speedy congressional approval of the SALT agreements should precede action on defense appropriations, as arms-control advocates on Capitol Hill now nrge. The request that several billion dollars he voted for new offensive weapons was put forward originally as a hedge in the event the SALT negotiations failed. Now that SALT-1 has succeeded, the Laird line is that bargaining chips for SALT-2 are essential.

The fallacy in this position is that the treaty limiting defensive anti-balistic missiles (BMs) to a low level has fundamentally altered the strategic outlook. It has headed off a defense-offense race in nuclear weap-

Secretary of Defense Laird's insistence in onry by eliminating the chief fear that has dogged first one side then both since the opening of the nuclear era, the fear of a pre-emptive first strike. With ABMs limited, neither side could even hope to intercept the retaliatory attack that would follow a first strike.

Furthermore, neither side now needs more than a fraction of the offensive strategic missiles it already has. Those missiles and MIRV multiple warheads were designed to provide assured retaliation by penetrating any ABM network that might be put in place. With ABM deployment limited, there is no reason to press forward to increase offensive capability further.

The real difficulty is one the United States has created and could itself remove. Insistence that offensive as well as defensive weapons be limited has now been carried to the point of a unilateral American decisration suggesting that the SALT-1 treaty may he denounced in five years if SALT-2 fails to achieve comprehensive limits on offensive weaponry.

An offensive weapons treaty would be useful, but it does not have the importance of the ABM treaty in potentially slowing the arms race. To denounce the ABM treaty would be self-defeating, whatever happens in the defensive weapons field. There is plenty of time now for more cautious development of Trident, the long-range missile submarine that will cost as much as a SIbillion nuclear aircraft carrier and also for efforts to seek a less expensive follow-on bomber than the B-1 and to suspend deployment of Minuteman-3 and Poseldon. The projected Washington ABM system would be a futile waste.

Upward uf $3 billion a year might be cnt out of the administration's $83.2-billion defense budget by steps of this kind. More important, if Moscow reciprocates in restraint, chances would be improved for a SALT-2 agreement at lower rather than higher levels of offensive armament than now exist.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Fascist Threat in Italy

If Italy's democratic forces need a reminder that the election last month gave them only a reprieve and not a solution for a nagging national crisis, the neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement has provided a rude one. On the day President Leone designated Giulio Andreotti premier-elect, the leader of the MSI, Glorgio Almirante, threatened a Fascist takeover, which he hinted might get support from elements in the nation's armed forces. Despite his subsequent efforts to explain away his remarks they constituted an abrupt reversion to type for Mr. Almirante, a relic of Benito Mussolini's ill-fated Republic of Salo, who, during the election campaign, had used the unfamiliar language of legality and moderation. Obviously stung because Fascist gains at the polls fell far short of his hopes, Mr. Almirante warned in a speech at Florence, that, if the government continued to fail in its functions, the national right was "ready to replace the state." Mr. Almirante is certain to exploit with the utmost demagogy the persistence of terrorism in northern Italy, which has resulted since the election in the murder of a deputy police chief in Milan and in many bombing

The small but respected Republican party insists with some reason that Italy confronts genuine national emergency-"political, economic and social"-that can best be overcome hy a coalition of all five democratic parties, from the Socialists on the left to the Liberals on the moderate right. Mr. Andreotti's mandate is broad enough for such coalition; but he has encountered immediate difficulties.

The Socialist party, some of whose leaders still hope eventually to bring the Commuhists into the governing coalition, refuse to join any cabinet that includes Liberals. There are doubts that the Socialists could even coexist alongside the Social Democrats, with whom they once were united. And some of his colleagues are urging Mr. Andreatti to try to govern only with Christian Democrats, at least until after crucial party congresses in the fall.

Mr. Andreotti thus begins his task in a climate of rising tensions, economic and political unrest and democratic divisions. But the Republicans are surely right about the dimensions of Italy's emergency and the hope must be that Mr. Almirante's outburst will help bring the democratic majority to-

EEC Summit

It was only to be expected that the preparations for the Community summit meeting in the autumn would be marked by the occasional row. There is a tradition inside the Six that the path to any major agreement is a stony one. The participation of the prospective members in the summit is no reason why the founder members should not carry on in their well-established way.

The reasons for M. Pompidon's sudden access of impatience are manifold. The result of the referendum still rankles and there is thus a strong desire to ensure that the Paris summit should provide the president with a resounding success. The French are always tough negotiators and warnings about the consequences for the Community if the French viewpoint is not accepted are a standard weapon in the negotiating armoury.

President Pompidon has made it very clear that he wants the political secretarist in Paris. Quite apart from the desire to make Paris into Europe's capital in this way, there is the wish to keep the secretariat away from the commission and thereby downgrade Brussels. There is nothing new in that. But, assuming that in the longer term the trend is towards greater European unity, it would ohviously be wrong to set up a potential rival to the Community institutions in another place.

-From the Financial Times (London). * * *

Are yoo Europeans, and do or don't you want to make Europe according to European, and no longer Atlantic, criteria? Such is the question that France is clearly asking her various European partners. This is also what Mr. Pompidou tirelessly repeats on every occasion offered him to exchange views with the leaders of neighboring and friendly countries . . . On the response to this question have depended for fifteen years any progress in European construction, and will depend this time the success -and even the principle-of the summit meeting of the Ten in Paris in October. Thus could be summed up the speech made the day before yesterday by Mr. de Lipkowski hefore the WEU Assembly meeting in Paris . . . The only surprising thing actually is the astonishment of our partners when they assert they do not understand the raison d'être for this warning.

BRIONNE, Prance.—Like most fishermen I am saddened by the gradual disappearance of the fat trout which used to lie in these lovely Norman streams. The Risle has been intermittently polluted over stretches as have the Charentonne and Andelle, Plastic bottles, indestructible rubbish and increasing chemical poison quotients have replaced the May fly hatch.

This sickening and unsightly trend is but a tiny facet of the booming global problem of pollution that is readjusting the familiar ecological balance, destroving some species of life and discommoding man. All this is now being discussed at a UNsponsored ecological conference in Stockholm.

Ecology is a popular political issue but more pap than policy has so far been edduced. Soviet Uniou, a major offender -and victim-with cholding lakes and rivers, is not even in attendance. There is worry about supersonic eircraft but no one has even dared propose that private automobiles be banned from streets of major cities to give them a chance to breathe.

The major threats to atmospheric purity stem from common, not uncommon, inventions. The brain children of Henry Ford are more deadly than those of the Wright brothers. And the flushing toilet which wastes shrinking water reserves is, nowadays with its detergent cleansers, a menace to rural areas.

There can never be major ecological reform until world government limits population and polices the earth's surface. Nor is there any prospect of such world government in time to act.

Ed Muskie and Hubert Humphrey grinning bravely alongside George Mc-Govern, as if they had won Muskie, relaxed in defeat, showing the amiable side of his character at the National Press Club, which somehow he lost in the struggle of the primary elections, and making his audience wonder and even regret.

And finally there was George Wallace in the newspaper pictures, with his hairy and muscular arms and a bullet in his spine, promising to go to the Democratic convention at Miami Beach, paralyzed or not, to fight on for the Presidency of the United States.

The Losers' Thoughts

The newspaper reporters and photographers put all this down, but it is really beyond us. We celebrate the winners and leave the losers to the novelists, who are off somewhere else, and, oddly, pay little attention to the human drama of American politics.

What do they think in the night, these losers? What of the Duchess of Windsor from Baltimore, who cost her lover the throne of England, going back from his grave at Windsor to her refuge outside Paris? What of Edward Kennedy, the heir apparent of the family dynasty and the hope of the Democratic party, who lost it all at the dike bridge on Chappaquiddick? Muskie is a less complicated

Ecological Choice

Barry Commoner's excellent feature article (IHT, June 5) leaves out one important fact when discussing the population aspect of the ecology problem. Until today only two ways have been found to reduce a people's growth rate. The first way is to make them richer; an increase in the material comforts of an impoverished people is always followed a generation later by a drop in their birth rate. The other way is to kill them. (Imposed contraception has never worked on a population.)

Since the time until doomsday is too short for the poor nations to jack themselves up by their own bootstraps, the only feasible way of enriching their peoples is through a massive re-distribution of the wealth, both within and between countries.

Will the rich prefer to pay or to kill? And if they choose the latter, will they survive them-

Buckley to Task

In his article "McGovern and the National Mood' (IHT, May 30) William F. Buckley jr. dropped the pretense that he is an advocate of intelligent analysis. He donned unabashedly the dunce cap of a yellow journalist, dipped his hands into a bucket. of unseemly mud, and then proceeded to sling hysterical sophistries at a man who has com-

Buckley would have us believe that McGovern has ignored the busing issue when, in fact, Mc-Govern has made his views known (without, granted, playing upon unreasoned passions as do Messrs. Humphrey, Nixon, and Wallace). He would like for us to believe that McGovern is speaking out for an Arab victory over Israel but that nobody has noticed when, in fact, that vicious insinuation is merely a cheap product of Buckley's imagination. He would have us believe that McGovern desires, yes desires second-class status for the United States, that he wants to turn the world over to the Soviet Union-come now, is Mr. Buckley prepared to support that kind o character assassination with something other than an emotional plea structured on an infantile use of his intelligence quotient? Lastly, he would have us believe that McGovern is a demon-possessed pig. albeit a frisky one ("Gadarene swine" is the cuphemism the crudite Mr. Buckley used). Such name-calling insults belong more appro-priately in an editorial written by a neophyte hate-monger empiored by the Peking Review. In short, I admire Mr. Buckley when he uses his abilities to persuade by the means of reason but when he descends to the level of a propagandist poured from the same mold as those who, in 1964, ettacked Mr. Goldwater by the means of perfidious instigation of fear he causes me to lose that

Lonesome George' McGovern Not So Lonesome Anymore

By R.W. Apple Jr.

WASHINGTON (NYT).—It was the Saturday night before the California primary. On a dark Los Angeles County freeway, a car bearing a McGovern bumper sticker whizzed past.

"That's funny," said Marcla Temple, a campaign worker for Sen. George McGovern, who began with him in the snows of New Hampshire six months ago. "I can remember how when we used to see a bumper sticker, we always looked inside to see who it was. Chances are, it was someone on the staff.

"But that's ell changed now. Everything is."

Indeed it is. In the wake of four primary triumphs last Tuesday—in California, New Jersey, New Mexico and his home state of South Dakota-lonesome George is not lonesome any more.

In California's winner-take-all primary, Sen. McGovern picked up 271 delegates with about 45 percent of the vote against 40 percent for Hubert Humphrey. In New Jersey, an industrial state where labor, the party and thereforc Sen. Humphrey were supposed to be especially strong, Sen. McGovern won at least 71 out of 109 delegates and may have as many as 90 by convention time. In New Mexico, he plexed up 10 remaining 8; Sen. Humphrey, under the state's system of apportioning all the delegates among the two leading contestants, got none. And running uncontested in South Dakota, Sen. McGovern swept all 17.

Thus, George McGovern now has 942.35 delegate votes in the bag, something like 400 more close at hand, and very good prospects of more than the 1,509 needed for nomination when the roll is called for the first time in Miami Beach

How did he get here? What did he accomplish last week? What remains for him to accomplish before he can move into tha

The Vietnam war was a major reason.

• Sen. Humphrey proved strong enough to knock Sen. Edwund S. Muskie out of the race, but not strong enough to assemble a winning coalition himself. Sen. Humphrey proved, as one of his California managers said, to be "psychologically obsolescent" and the voters knew it. That left Sen, McGovern as the only widely known alternative.

• The party organizations in key states showed themselves to be even more hollow than had been suspected. Except for a few statea where labor remains strong. such as Pennsylvania, the only working, positive, productive or-ganization in the field belonged to George McGovern.

In an era when many voters feel deceived and left out, Sen. McGovern's quiet earnestness, his subtle and effective television commercials and his army of canvassers apparently served to reassure and "plug in" tens of thousands of persons to whom alienation was a more important factor than issues.

• Sen. McGovern and his staff proved themselves astute strateguts-not only in the way they perceived the pessibilities of the party's reform rules, which Sen. McGovern drafted, but also in the way they picked their primary spots. Everyone advised against

His stated reasons were two: In a year of reform, he had no appetite for the kingmaker's role, and he was worried about what Sen McGovern's decidedly murky positions on welfare and tax reform might do to the party and ultimately to the country.

(On the second point, at least, he was speaking for many of the governors, who made it clear at their meeting in Houston last week that they thought a Mc-Govern nomination might lead to an electoral debacle, and defeat for a large percentage of congressmen, especially in conservatire states.).

There may have been unspoken reasons as well. Perhaps the Cramatic slippage in Sen. Mc-Govern's standing in the final week in California (he went from a 29-point edge in the California poll to a 5-point edge in the balsions in World War II), this small failing) had something to do with said: "The people want a winns establishment man were not it. To help fill the gap left by the medical colleges in turning out sufficient physicians to treat China's masses, the nation relies heavily on an estimated 500,000 "barefoot doctors."

The training of the "barefoot doctors" is at first glance a pret-ty hurry-up affair. At most they spend a year cramming at a hospital. Some do not even get that much training. But they are required to spend two months of every year working in a hospital and to take additional courses.

In view of the medical situation in China today, the important thing about these doctors is that the half loaf of medical care they provide is better than no loaf at all. Millions who had little or no care in the past are now getting some, even if it is not up to Harvard or Mayo Clinic

This was explained by a Health Ministry official in Peking. "We realize that the so-called barefoot doctors do not have all of the skills that we would like them to have," be said. "But faced we are by a critical shortage of fully trained physicians and the time it would take to produce them, we had no alternative."

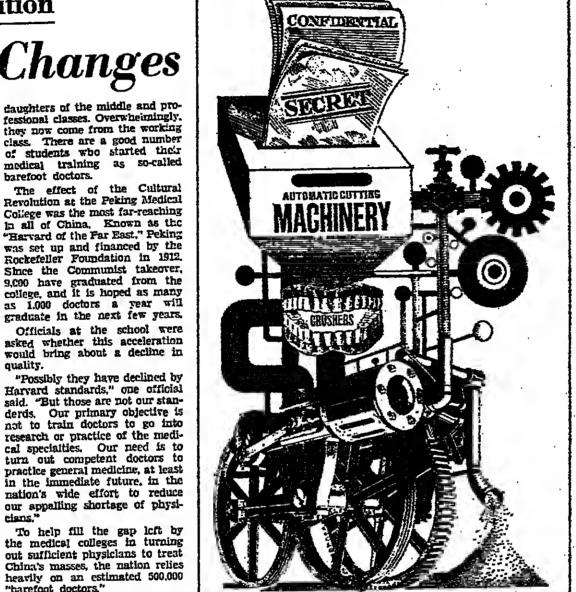

The illnesses the "barefoot doctors" can treat successfully are for the most part the common ones, such as colds, stomach aches, cuts, bruises, sprains, minor infections, diarrhea and constipation. Some of them can take care of more complicated sicknesses, such as tonsilltis, asthma and rheumatism. They are also highly effective in carrying out inoculation programs. Although they are great users of traditional Chinese herb medicines, "barefoot doctors" do not rely on them exclusively. They know about Western drugs and use them quite often, sometimes in combination with the herb remedies. The same holds true for acupuncture. One thing clearly emerged in questioning "barefoot doctors." It is certain that none of them could pass a state medical licensing board examination in the United States.

They have no ability to handle heart attacks. "We have heard of but would never attempt" such emergency measures as open or closed chest massage of the heart to restore its function, one of them said.

When asked about cancer, one "barefoot doctor" volunteered,
"It's not the sort of thing I was trained to treat. It's way beyond me. Cancer must be treated by

The Booming Business Of 'Dita Beard Machines'

By Alden Whitman

NEW YORK (NYT).—In obedience to Newton's third law of motion—to every force there is an equal and opposite reaction—the office shredding machine business is booming in response to the growing number of confidential documents to be destroyed. The equivalency is not yet total, however, although there are portents that more and more companies are installing devices to dispose of their security-sensitive papers.

Sometimes jokingly called "the Dita Beard machines," an allusion to an International Telephone and Telegraph memo that somehow escaped destruction, the devices are now selling at a rate of 10,000 a year, about 25 percent above the 1971 level. No one seems to know for certain what this means in terms of dollar gross. But one industry source suggested it might run as high as $10 million.

The machines, which operate on electricity, come in a variety of sizes and designs, and can cut paper into shreds as small as 1/32-inch wide. Some machines can handle up to 2,500 pounds of secrets an hour, including plastic cards, cellulose crepe and aluminum plates. The shred, if that is the word for the machines' product, can be baled and buried. The shredders range in prices from about $250 to $3,150, depending on their complexity and capacity. The design features of most machines are patented, but the shredding principle itself is not. The principle involves the use of hard metal cutters that slice through papers fed into them Usually, the cutiers are tough enough to cope effortlessly with staples or

You, your secretary or your office boy can destroy unwanted correspondence or confidential records safely and quietly," one manufacturer assures his potential customers. Makers of shredders so far are comparatively few eight companies in the United States, Although makers of shredders and sales people are reluctant to talk about specific customers, sources said that federal agencies make considerable use of the devices. Private corporations mentioned include General Motors, General Electric, IIT, Boeing and Lockheed, Law firms, communications companies, banks and railroads are among other major users, according to trade sources.

Big companies such as General Electric and General Motors don't like to discuss their internal document security systems, but they all have quite elaborate mechanisms that they hope control the flow of confidential material. These ordinarily involve a central security office, hand delivery of memos by trusted messengers and ultimate shredding of excess copies.

Of the giant concerns, the International Business Machines Corporation is in the odd position of not being able to destroy anything. Because it is in litigation in antitrust matters, it is under a court order to keep all its records, a company spokesman said. "We can't even shred the most innocuous memo-even a .oemo telling a worker to take a day off for vacation." he explained with a rueful laugh. "It's horrible."

Since company-confidential matters nowadays are often committed both to paper and to a computer, IBM has set about to develop some means of keeping computer banks secret, except to the holder of a special code. The company, a spokesman said the other day, is committing between $30 million and $40 million over the next five years to research and development

Fighting Off Doomsday

By Walter Sullivan STOCKHOLM (NYT).-In the corridors of the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment, among the tents of the youth encampment on an unused airfield near this city and through the concurrent meetings. here ci various political colorations, the same debate swirled last week: How should man control his growth to save his The debate pits scientist against scientist, politician against politician and youth activist against youth activist.

One argument calls for a "steady-state" world, one in which the current deterioration of the environment, degrading the quality of the world's air, land and water, has been virtually brought to a halt. It would be one in which the population has been stabilized and the consumption of raw materials held to a level not substantially greater than the production of such materials from recycling and through geological processes. It would be one in which energy use would be compatible with this planet's fossil fuels.

Some of those supporting this argument believe that social chaos, revolution and even nuclear war to gain control over depleting resources will result within a generation or two if there is not a radical reorientation in the advanced countries.

The Other Pole

At the other extreme are those who see no need in the foresceable future to alter the emphasis on growth, and indeed contend that a steady-state world would lead to the destruction of the world's economies, which, they say, must expand to prosper.

The middle ground has been occupied by those who argue for. a change in the concept of growth for a change in values whereby growth would be measured by the improvement in the quality of life rather than on material produc-

This view has been expressed by Maurice F. Strong of Canada, who, as secretary-general of the conference, has set it on a course of compromise and accommodation that so fer has averted any disastrous confrontations.

The UN conference, four years in the making, was called to produce a framework for international action to halt the de-terioration of the environment and conserve the earth's dwindling resources. Representatives of 114 nations are attending the two-week session. The Soviet Union, however, is boycotting it because East Germany was denied full participation.

Fear of Paralysis

The greatest fear for this conference has been that it would be paralyzed by confrontations between the have and have not netions. The latter, for example, are insisting that if advanced countries set high environmental standards for their imports such as on engine emissions from the products of Brazil's new automobile plants then those countries must compensate for the arided cost of such features.

been the suspicion of "ihird world" countries that the industrial nations might set limits on interestional pollution that would tabibit their uphill fight toward industrialization. Careful drafting by preparatory conferences Dr. Saburo Okita, president of inevitability of catastrophe of the recommendations being the Japan Economic Research need subscribe to no dooms. voted on here has helped avoid serious controversy in this reed plans for monitoring the en- . was needed to provide the dema vironment-watching for climate for imports that would stimul change and regional trems in air. pollution, as well as trends in the health of the oceans. The basic problem of how to avoid such changes, however, could not be so easily resolved.

Still undecided is the fate of the Decisration on the Ruman Environment, which was also drafted in advance but which, on the initiative of China and other countries, is now being re-viewed in closed sessions. The declaration, among other things, states that population growth in some areas threatened to "frustrate all efforts" to conquer poverty and preserve a livable environment. This weekend, however, the leader of the Chinese delegation, Tang Ke, while supporting population control, argued that the rate of growth in production and in science and technology typically outpaces population growth. "Any ideas of pessimism, stagnation and inertia are wrong," he said. Man, he added, must constantly "go on discovering, inventing, creating and advancing." Different points of view have been reflected in the discussions within the conference and in the rival meetings organized by nongovernmental groups. One is represented by "The Limits to Growth," a study of world trends in population, raw material consumption and other factors carried out for the Club of Rome by a group at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It predicts that within a century civilization will go into an uncontrolable tailspin unless population Lanking in the background has growth and the use of raw materials can be stabilized.

Although the economy, prerall, is still moving ahead briskly. accerul recent negative developments-with respect to prices, unemployment, controls and the surge of free-market gold quota-tions-have spawned renewed nervousness and caution in tho financial markets.

Another situation also caused concern in Wall Street; the increasing likelihood that Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota will win the Democratic nomination for the presidency. When Sen, McGovern swept victory in the primaries in California, New Jersey, New Mexico and South Dakota last week, the financial community began to take his candidacy very seriously, and apprehension seem ed to crystallize among investors.

Republicans Confident Most Wall Streeters believe President Nixon could defeat Sen. McGovern, but there is some degree of uncertainty—and the market often uses uncertainty as an excuse to gn down. While the increasing success of the McGovern campaign was certainly a factor in the de-pressed mood of the financial markets, the major factor was probably the data released at the close of the preceding week showing an upsurge in wholesale prices, with its inflationary implications. The only encouraging development recently, apart from the strong performance of the domestic economy, was the federal government's reduction in its averages chalked up sharp deelines for the week, with the widewatched Dow Jones industrial indicator off more than 26 points to 934.45, its greatest loss in seven months. This was not accompanied by any surge in trading activity—an encouraging sign.

A contributing factor in the market's recent weakness was the disposition of some investors to take long-term capital gains. It was noted that more than six months have passed since the market started a rather spectacufor rise after reaching its 1971 lows around Thanksgiving. The Dow Index, for example, scared over 170 points, or more than 21 percent, between Nov. 23 of last year and the latter part of this market, the major factors behind the credit markets' performance were the renewed doubts about the effectiveness of the flight against inflation and some concern about rising expenditures for the Vietnam war.

Other reasons included the recent tightening moves by the Federal Reserve and a general reluctance on the part of portfolio managers in buy fixed-income securities although they were flushed with money for investment. There was widespread belief that interest rates are headed still higher.

In the corporate bond market, two new double-A issues priced to yield 7.375 and 7.45 did not sell very quickly, while underwriters gave up the effort to sell double-A utility issues that were priced at 7.29 and 7.25 percent.

The stock market suffered a broad decline last week and all the leading market averages sustained their deepest losses of the year under a continued but moderate volume of profit-taking. Turnover for five sessions slowed to 712 million shares from the preceding week's pace, when 61.3 million shares changed hands in four sessions.

Stocks on the New York Stock Exchange that declined for the week outnumbered those that advanced by a wide margin, with 1,366 losers and 408 winners. There were 157 that closed unchanged.

Some of the market averages posted their widest losses in seven months and some had their greatest drops in almost a year.

Eurobonds

(Centinued from Page 5) where U.S. firms were the obligors because of the exposure to U.S. taxes—if the bondholder dies his estate is subject to estate tax on the transfer of the bonds. The Swiss, whose banking secrecy has led to problems with for-

But the big Swiss banks have ow decided that their fear over this issue was exaggerated; that the bonds are in bearer form and thus it is not easy to trace the beneficial owner and that, in any case, it is not the bank's problem to look into the tax liability of its clients

Thus, Swiss Bank Corp. is comanager of the Owens issue and, with this stamp of approval of sorts, one can expect more U.S. obligor paper. (The advantage to the borrower is that the cost of establishing an offshore financial unit is obviated.)

In the straight bond sector

Texaco has announced an $80million offering evenly split between 15-year bonds, expected at 7 3/4 percent, and five-year notes, expected at 7 1/4 percent. The Australian unit of Swiss Aluminium is raising $35 million in 15-year bonds with an expected coupon of 8 percent and Scandinavian Airline Systems is seeking $30 million with an anticipated 6 percent coupon.

In the non-dollar sector, Hammersley Iron Finance will float a 100-million-deutsche-mark loan with an expected coupon of 6 3/4 percent. At the same time, the European Coal and Steel Community is floating an issue of 100 million DM. This is being managed solely by a group German banks, but as it will be exempt from withholding taxes it will be treated like a Euromark loan, with a coupon of 6 1/2 percent, and sppeal to the same people who buy foreign DM loans.

Panarctic Oils Finds More Gas in Arctic

MONTREAL, June 11 (AP-DJ). Panarctic Oils Ltd. has made another natural gas strike at Drake Point, in the Canadian Arctic, Jean Chretien, Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Develop-

Mr. Chretien also said natural gas reserves discovered by Panarctic so far are sufficent to justify a survey this summer of two potential routes for a gas pipeline 2,200 to 2,500 miles long from Cornwallis Island in the central Arctic archipelago to eastern markets.

He said the new find tested

Two DM issues were priced last an indicated coupon of 8 1/8 perweek, Ontario Hydro-Electric at cent and some grumbling was heard about the 1/8-point cut White, Weld, for example, was refusing to make a market in the issue, charging that too little notice had been given about the intention to cut the coupon. Trading restrictions were still in place on both issues, but some dealers indicated further discounts on both issues. Overall, prices on the secondary market were down 3.4 of a point for the

The market will be watching closely the final terms on the Texaco bond. A 7 3.4 percent coupon for a triple-A credit-rated borrower, if it is priced at par, would imply an upshift in rates, as there is normally more than a 1/2 to 3 4 point spread between triple-As and single-As, and further weakness for the recently issued 8s from single-A borrowers Another source of concern for the market is the reports of a heavy flow of new issues, esoecially from U.K. borrowers, now

In the French franc sector, the World Bank's 150-million-franc bond was priced at 99 3/4 with a coupon of 7 1/4 percent. On the secondary market, prices on Eurofranc loans held quite firm last week. By contrast, DM secondary market prices were off about 1/2 a point.

Transactions reported by Euro-clear for the week ended June 9 totaled $233.8 million, up from $209.3 million in the previous

In a technical move on the secondary market. CEDEL reports that as of July 1 it will enable participants to establish an overdraft facility whereby they would have 24 hours to cover a debit position (opposed to a strictly cash basis at present). On the diagramed deal South play: He ducked promptly, causreached a borderline game contract and ran into an imaginative double and fine defense. The opening one-spade bid and one no-trump response were standard, and North then had a rebid problem.

Two hearts would have been an underbid and three hearts an overhid, so he settled for two no-trump, describing the strength of his hand at the cost of concealing his heart suit. South had enough to continue to three no-trump, and West ventured a double. He knew from the bidding that his opponents were at full stretch, and he had a good suit to lead and a side entry. South ducked West's opening lead of the heart queen and won the heart continuation with the king. He led a club to dummy's king, and East made an umwiral

The appearance of the club jack was a blow to South's hopes, and West was able to establish his hearts while he still held the spade ace as an entry.

The club suit was now useless, and South expected to go down two tricks. However, the gods came to his aid. He gave up a spade trick, and West won and cashed his hearts. The spade eight in dummy proved to be a formitous trick, and South was only down one.

If East had not made his ducking play in clubs, South might well have played the club queen through fear of allowing West an entry. This play would have worked, and the doubled game would have been made.

THE SUMMER GAME By Roger Angell. Viking. 303 pp. $7.50

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haur

Angell's "The Summer Game" do not seem promising. Ten years' worth of reports on basehall that have already appeared in The New Yorker, where Mr. Angell is chief resident buff? Twenty-one installments on our great national pastime written during a period when thanks to expanding teams and schedules, carpetbagging owners and Charles O. Finley-baseball has threatened to become our great national bore? Pages devoted to such forgettable episodes as the triumph of the New York Yankees over the San Francisco Giants in the 1962 World Series, or the Orioles' sweep of the A's in the 1971 divisional playoffs? Who—as the expression goes— needs it? But what such a sum-mary of "The Summer Game" fails to reckon with is Mr. Angell's love of the game. It is a love that sees a fair complexion beneath the old girl's flaking make-up. It is a love that still finds the prospect of a summer without box scores to mull over "like trying to think about infinity." It is a like Ossee Schreckengost, Smead Jolley, Cletus Elwood Poffenberger and Lucdous Easter. It wonders how many Eurleigh Grimeses can dance on the head of a pin.

It is a love that had Mr. Angell chasing around the country from 1962 to 1971 attending "grand-mothers" funerals"—his euphemism for significant confrontations on emerald diamonds all the way from San Francisco Bay to Back Bay. It had him poking around the vulgar splendors of the Houston Astrodome, trying to imagine plastic worms a-wiggling beneath the pluckproof plastic grass, or sitting at the right hand of Judge Roy Hothernz, "the Kublai Khan of the Domed Stadium," who swigged his coffee from a golden cup, dropped cigar ashes into an outstretched golden glove and expounded for Mr. Angell's benefit on the art of entertaining baseball fans with electronic scoreboards and fine restaurants, as if watching the game itself weren't entertainment enough

It is a love that forgives recent byrantine intrusions into the classic lines and planes of the game forgives Walter O'Mailey and Horace Stoneham for cynically collaborating on baseball's pfigrimage to the West; forgives: even Charles O. Finley and his designing of "horrendous uniforms" that made his Oakland players "look like members of a tavern-league bowling team." Forno matter what they did to the surface of the game, there was always the game itself for Mr. Angell, with its geometry, its mounting tension, and its "seamless and invisible... time... a bubble within which players move at exactly the same pace and rhythms as all their predecessors. Mr. Angell loves it.

old to take the Derby and Belmont as two-thirds of the triple crown, Zev (1923), Twenty Grand (1931), Johnston (1938), Shut Out (1942), Middleground (1960). Needles (1966) and Chateaugay (1963) were the others.

"The Belmont was easier than I thought it would be," Laurin admitted. He had expected Key To The Mint to be more formi-dable. Surprisingly, Key To The Mint was only a co-second choice with Nn Le Hace, at 7 to 2. No Le Hace, the runner-np in the Derby and Preskness, was sixth. Smiling Jack retreated to eighth place after alternating with Key To The Mint in pressing Riva Ridge's pace of :23 4.5, :48, 1:11 2/5, 1:36 3/5 (for the mile) and 2:02 1/5.

Turootte, criticized by Laurin for his Preskness effort on Riva Ridge, philosophized after his rocking-chair ride that "it doesn't matter what kind of a race you're talking about; whatever the dis-tance. The horse is always better (more important) than you are.

"Twice this year, in the Everglades (when he was fourth, also in the slop) and in the Preakness, I've asked Riva Ridge to give me his best and he just didn't have it Every other time, as today, he ham't even needed his best. Maybe he just prefers it dry." The 3.28 was the third best clocking in the historic stakes.
